Blue Crane*

*Blue Crane - Endangered - IUCN Status: Vulnerable

South Africa's national bird is under major threat due to habitat loss, poisoning and collisions with electric wires: because the birds have a blind spot in their vision they frequently end up entangled in power lines, a problem that is exacerbated by their long, gangly legs. The African Crane Conservation Programme is consequently currently exploring possible ways of making the wires visible to the birds. There are still 26,000 blue cranes in South Africa but the population has been in a decline since 1980 which has yet to plateau. In the last two decades the blue crane has largely disappeared from the Eastern Cape, Lesotho, and Swaziland.

Illustrator: Tsepo Makate

Year of launch: 2017

Size: 1000 x 1000 x 350 mm / 39 x 39 x 14 in

Stripped away from all excess, this hanging chair has a circular powder coated frame with a single sheet of leather hanging loose within it, to create a sleek, sexy, and oh so comfortable experience. This chair's clean lines and its "lightness" makes it a perfect fit for any space.

This functional art piece was designed by Joanina and David Pastoll in collaboration with Tsepo Makate - South African artist and illustrator - who did the beautiful illustrations. Have a look at the range of drawings available to order.

The Leather is hand dyed and the illustration is then carved - also by hand into the leather. Unique variances will be found in each one.

Pairing the purity of simple tubular steel with the sensual warmth of natural hide - it has a sleek look and an air of beauty and functional elegance. Form-fitting comfort perfect both for indoor and covered outdoor spaces.

The SLING CHAIR can disassemble and splits in half for flat packing - great for packing and freight.
